I am vehemently against cutting down successful people to make way for weaklings.

A society that cuts down its most productive for its least productive becomes an inhuman society, where savages like Stalin and Hitler or Bill Clinton rise to the top using hatred and envy as their tool for taking power.

Bill Gates has been a weak advocate for himself and his company. That is why this case has dragged on for so long. He is not for freedom and innovation as much as he thinks because he supports the anti-trust laws.

He is not my hero. But, the fact remains that ripping down successful companies allows the Enrons of the world to take over.

How long has the Justice Department attacked good people and ignored the bad?

All this time Microsoft was producing real new products, while Enron was screwing people over. Where was the Justice Department?

When terrorists were plotting to destroy freedom, the Justice spent its time attacking Elian Gonzalez. The evil of that policy is in the body count at Ground Zero.

There is something viciously wrong and dangerous in the choices made at the Justice Department. Hard-core pro-freedom Americans can see that.

The Microsoft case illustrates that we no longer live in a free country. It's basically illegal to be "all that you can be." The Anti-trust laws don't allow it.

The anti-trust laws are anti-American.

Microsoft has been attacked for shotty products and for market domination. Look at that contradiction. A company whose products truly fail the customer loose market share. Yet, the government thinks there's a crime going on there.

There is. It the crime of evading the contradiction.

The crime is the propaganda campaign by liberal fascists who want the state to regulate and dominate the marketplace.

There is injustice in the marketplace. It is the unregulated intervention of government in our lives, in our schools, in our hospitals, and our markets.

The injustice is tipping the balance of good companies towards the bad.

As a court, your job is to ensure justice. Now is the time to publicly absolve Microsoft of any wrong-doing and apologize to the millions of Americans who have lost over $5 trillion in the stock market collapse caused by the USG.

Throw this case out of court.

It's the least you could do.
